5 I. INTRODUCTION

6 There are certain laudatory aspects of this settlement. Class Counsel argue that the gross 7 settlement value of $32,083,905.00 is the largest settlement achieved in a case brought under the 8 Telephone Consumer Protection Act, 47 U.S.C. § 227, et seq. (the“TCPA”). Class Counsel have made 9 their motion for attorneys’ fees available on the settlement website thirty days prior to the objection
10 deadline, in keeping with the approach recommended in In re Mercury Interactive Corp. Sec. Litig., 618 11 F.3d 988 (9th Cir. 2010). The notice also informs class members of claims being released, and even 12 informs them that for non-emergency calls or text messages made using an automatic telephone dialing 13 system and/or an artificial prerecorded voice, without the prior express consent of the called party, the 14 TCPA provides for damages of $500 per call, or $1,500 for willful violations.
15

16 But the rosy picture painted by Class Counsel ignores the real problems with the settlement.
17 Much of the $32,083,905.00 settlement fund will pay attorneys’ fees, administrative charges, and 18 unnamed cy pres recipients, rather than Class Members. The attorneys’ fees – which are based on the 19 gross settlement value rather than the monetary compensation that will class members – are high as a 20 percentage of the fund, and excessively so in light of the lodestar multiplier requested. The fees 21 requested seem inappropriate given the minimal compensation being offered to individual class 22 members. Through this settlement, statutory damages of between $500 and $1500 per call are being 23 compromised for pennies on the dollar. Given the poor result, the high fees and high lodestar multiplier 24 are unwarranted.
25
26
27
28

2 A. The compensation offered to class member is too low

3 As described in the Detailed Notice, under 47 U.S.C. §227(b)(3), plaintiffs are entitled to treble 4 damages, or up to $1,500 for knowing or willful violations, and up to $500 for negligent violations.

5 With an individual subject to many non-consensual calls, text messages or fax transmissions, potential 6 damages are significant. As the records are all electronic, violations of the TCPA are easy to prove.

7 Despite the ease of proof and large penalties provided for by the TCPA, the settlement proposes 8 to award individual class members a mere $20 to $40 (or $20 each for all mortgage related call or all 9 credit card calls). This is too low. Other class action cases alleging violations of the TCPA have 10 entitled class members to recoveries more in keeping with the damages provided for under the TCPA.
11 In Samantha Ellison v. Steve Madden Ltd., case number 2:11-cv-05935, in the U.S. District Court for the 12 Central District of California, according to the judge's minute order, every class member submitting a 13 valid claim would be eligible to receive $150, unless the total claims exceeded $10 million, in which 14 case each class member would receive a smaller amount. Likewise in Kramer v. Autobytel Inc., et al, 15 Case Number 4:10-cv-02722, Northern District of California, Judge Claudia Wilken gave preliminary 16 approval to a settlement under which class members would receive payments of up to $100 each. The 17 settlement of $20 to $40 per class member provided for here seems woefully inadequate in light of these 18 awards.

19 The settlement also seems too low in light of the harassing nature of the calls complained of in 20 the complaints. The calls that form the subject of this lawsuit are not just non-consensual marketing 21 calls, but were instead particularly harassing calls aimed at debt collection. As noted in the Ramirez 22 Complaint, when "Mr. and Mrs. Ramirez fell behind on their mortgage, BANA began a campaign of 23 harassment by telephone to collect on the missed payments. BANA would call their home and Mrs.
26
27
28

1 Ramirez' personal cell phone in sequence at multiple times per day." Ramirez Complaint, ¶ 7, page. 3.
2 This suggests that many of the Class Members did not receive one or two calls, but instead suffered 3 repeated harassing calls. Each individual claimant could be entitled to substantial compensation under 4 the TCPA – which establishes penalties for each call.

5 The Defendants' size, and the degree to which the settlement would penalize the bank, should 6 also be considered in evaluating the fairness of the settlement. The Ramirez Complaint noted that 7 according to the most recent financial report, Bank of America was the largest mortgage loan servicer in 8 the United States, servicing 13.4 million loans. On its website, the parent company notes:

10 Bank of America is one of the world's largest financial institutions, serving 11 individual consumers, small- and middle-market businesses and large 12 corporations with a full range of banking, investing, asset management and other 13 financial and risk management products and services. We serve approximately 52 14 million consumer and small business relationships with approximately 5,400 retail 15 banking offices and approximately 16,300 ATMs and award-winning online 16 banking with 30 million active users. Bank of America is among the world's 17 leading wealth management companies and is a global leader in corporate and 18 investment banking and trading across a broad range of asset classes, serving 19 corporations, governments, institutions and individuals around the world.

20 Bank of America Corporate Profile, available at http://investor.bankofamerica.com/21 phoenix.zhtml?c=71595&p=irol-homeprofile#fbid=Hbv9GeJ9xUC.

22 For such a large company, a $32 million settlement is pocket change. But not that pocket change 23 for the bank should translate into pennies on the dollar for class members subjected to the harassing calls 24 giving rise to this litigation.

25 B. The injunctive relief does not benefit the class

26 Class Counsel are proud of the changes Bank of America has agreed to implement to its policies 27 regarding unsolicited calls to clients. As noted in the attorneys' fee motion:

28 [T]he primary focus of the Settlement is Bank of America's prospective practice changes. Specifically, Bank of America has developed and implemented significant enhancements to its servicing systems which are designed to prevent

1 the calling of a cell phone unless a loan servicing record is systematically coded 2 to reflect the borrower's prior express consent to call his/her cell phone.

3 Plaintiffs' Motion for Attorneys' Fees ("Fee Motion"), page 3.

4 Although these practice changes are salutary, they don't benefit the class. These are prospective 5 changes that will benefit Bank of America's current customers and clients, but will not benefit former 6 mortgage holders who have possibly already lost their homes in foreclosure, or credit card customers 7 who fell behind on their payments, received harassing phone calls, and may have had their accounts 8 closed. Injunctive relief that benefits other people – including current customers – should not be 9 considered a benefit the class because "[t]he fairness of the settlement must be evaluated primarily on 10 how it compensates class members—not on whether it provides relief to other people." In re Dry Max 11 Pampers Litigation, 724 F.3d 713, 720 (6th Cir. 2013) (quoting Synfuel Techs., Inc. v. DHL Express 12 (USA), Inc., 463 F.3d 646, 654 (7th Cir. 2006). The court should remember that the period covered by 13 this litigation includes the great economic crisis of 2008, which affected millions of consumers, many of 14 whom lost their homes. Changing Bank of America's practices is a salutary goal, but these practice 15 changes should not be approved in lieu of real compensation to the injured individuals in the class.

16 C. The Attorneys' Fees Requested are Too High

17 Class Counsel's contingent fee request of 25% of the settlement is excessive. Although fee 18 awards of 25% may be accepted in the Ninth Circuit, such fees are not appropriate in all circumstances.
19 Attorney fee percentage awards in large class actions show an inverse relationship to the size of the 20 award. See Brian T. Fitzpatrick, An Empirical Study of Class Action Settlements and Their Fee Awards, 21 7 J. Empirical L. Stud. 811 (2010). For settlements over $30 million, the mean percentage award 22 nationwide is only 22.3%, less than the fee percentage sought by Class Counsel. Id.

23 Class Counsel are requesting attorneys' fees and costs of $8,020,976. After subtracting class 24 counsel's expenses of $64,365.14, the attorneys' fees requested are $7,956,610.86. This number should 25
26
27
28

1 be evaluated in both the benefit achieved for the class and in light of the hours spent on the litigation.
2 Class counsel claim to have devoted 2560.70 hours to litigation . Dividing the total fees by the number 3 of hours, yields average hourly compensation of $3,107.20. This is far too high.

4           Analysis of the lodestar multiplier requested by Class Counsel underscores that the attorneys'
5 fees requested are too high. Review of the lodestar provides an important check on excessive fees. A 6 court applying the percentage-of-the-fund method may use the lodestar method as a "cross-check on the 7 reasonableness of a percentage figure." Vizcaino v. Microsoft Corp., 290 F.3d 1043, 1050 & n.5 (9th
8 Cir. 2002). Here, Class Counsel are requesting a lodestar multiplier of 5.7. This is an extremely high 9 lodestar, particularly in a case where the compensation recovered for the class is so small relative to the 10 damages alleged. The authorities Class Counsel cite in their fee motion highlight the unreasonable 11 nature of the fee request. Class Counsel cite to Vizcaino to support the high multiplier, requested 12 although the multiplier counsel seek here is much higher than that approved in Vizcaino. The multiplier 13 approved in Vizcaino was only 3.65 – much less than the 5.7 sought here. Id., at 1052-1054 (finding 14 most multipliers ranged from 1.0 to 4.0).

15           As Class Counsel point out in their fee motion, courts consider several factors in determining 16 appropriate attorneys' fees. Factors a court may consider include: (1) the results achieved; (2) the risk of 17 litigation; (3) the skill required and the quality of work; (4) the contingent nature of the fee; and (5) 18 awards made in similar cases. Fee Motion, page 11, citing Vizcaino, 290 F.3d at 1048-1050 and In re 19 Omnivision, 559 F. Supp. 2d 1036, 1046 (N.D. Cal. 2007). Objectors do not agree, however, these 20 favors support the large fees sought. The results the attorneys achieved for the class are low in light of 21 the significant statutory damages provided for under the TCPA. Given this result, a high lodestar 22 multiplier is not warranted.

2 D. The payment procedures elevate Class Counsel's interests over those of the class

3 Under Section 7.04 of the Settlement Agreement, Class Counsel will be paid ten days after the 4 entry of the Final Approval Order and the order approving fees. Class Members, however, will only 5 receive their payment thirty days after the "Effective Date", which is defined as either thirty days after 6 entry of the Final Judgment approving the Settlement if no appeal or request for rehearing is filed, or, if 7 an appeal is filed, then five days after the appellate proceedings have been terminated. This provision 8 enables the lawyers to be paid before the case has been concluded, and before Class Members are paid.
9 This so-called quick pay provision is an affront to Class Members and shows Class Counsel is putting 10 their own interests in front of those of their clients. This provision disincentives Class Counsel from 11 conscientiously attending to the claims administration and funds distribution process – and divorces 12 Class Counsel's interest from those of the class. The court should not allow this. The attorneys should 13 receive their fees when Class Members get paid.

17 II. Joinder in Other Objections

18 These objectors join in and adopt all other objections or portions thereof not inconsistent with the

1 III. Conclusions

2 For the foregoing reasons and all others at oral argument, these objectors request that the court
3 sustain their objections enter such Orders as are necessary and just to alleviate the inherent unfairness, 4 inadequacies and unreasonableness of the Settlement.

26 <sup>1</sup> The court should allocate time for the usual personal onslaught against objector lawyers. However the 27 court should note this objection is well written and specifically aimed at real issues in the proposed 28 settlement. Class counsel should limit their response to the arguments presented. Nonetheless, to preempt any possibility of a false and unjustifiable accusation of objecting in bad faith and seeking to extort class counsel, House and Kirby are willing to stipulate to an injunction prohibiting themselves and their attorneys from accepting compensation in exchange for the settlement of this objection. See Brian T. Fitzpatrick, The End of Objector Blackmail?, 62 VAND. L. REV. 1623 (2009) (suggesting inalienability of objections as solution to a perceived objector blackmail problem). (This is also the proposal used by Center for Class Action Fairness.)<sup>8</sup>
