05/25/2015	332	PROPOSED SCHEDULING ORDER. The court overlooked the proposed scheduling order at ECF No. 325 until now. December 14 is not an available trial date: another case set then seems likely to go. December 7 is available. A potential problem with that date is that (as the attached proposed scheduling order shows) it makes other deadlines tight given that the pretrial conference needed to be set a week early on November 19 because the normal default date was Thanksgiving. The attached schedule finds some space by moving the final motions and hearing dates only a week forward, but that still puts expert disclosures back to July 2. The court assumes that the parties want a settlement conference before expert disclosures, but the only date available in June right now is June 25 after the civil motions calendar (so likely not until early afternoon). The court asks the parties to confer before Thursday about whether they want a December 7 trial date, whether they want to adjust any of the dates on the proposed schedule, and whether a January 25 trial date works better. If the parties want the December 7 date, the court is amenable to specially setting the pretrial conference on any other business day in November at 10 a.m. (perhaps November 24) because the court is handling the monthly criminal calendar. If the parties prefer January 25, they should submit a proposed order with their proposed schedule. (Beeler, Laurel) (Filed on 5/25/2015) (Entered: 05/25/2015)
